NORMALSTUDENTS RUSH THEATRES

CONSIDERABLE DAMAGE WAS DONE TO THEATRE IN EFFORT TO GET IN.

Friday night about 150 Normal students rushed the theatres. They succeeded in getting into the Wuerth theatre, but at the Martha Washington they met with resistance and did not succeed in getting into this theatre, due to the fact that the management was ready for them, and when they found the doors barred against them they proceeded with the rough stuff and undertook to batter down the doors. In the rush a good many were slightly bruised and several were hit with ice thrown by the students. Two of the ring leaders were arrested and taken to jail, where they were detained until late in the evening, when they were released.

Monday morning the two young men were arraigned in justice court on a charge of malicious destruction of property, but later the complaint was withdrawn by Mrs. Signor, who appeared and paid costs of $4.50 and let the boys go on their promise that they would reimburse her for all damages done. She shook hands with the boys, who thanked her for letting them off so easy.

This is the fourth time in a month that this theatre has been rushed—three times by the Normal and once by the high school students. It is understood that there will be no more rushing in theatres in Ypsilanti. The faculty will not allow this kind of sport in the future. The theatres had already given the students one free show and believe that they should not be called upon to stand for this rushing any time some student felt so inclined and got up a bunch to help them out in what they seem to think is a great lark.

GUESTS ANN ARBOR KIWANIS

The Ypsilanti Kiwanis club was the guest Monday evening of the Ann Arbor Kiwanians and after enjoying a fine banquet they listened to two addresses, one by Prof. Jack Brumm of the University of Michigan, and the other by Dr. Stephens, of Detroit.

GAVE TALK AT THE METHODIST CHURCH

Speaking Friday at the Armistice day celebration at the M. E. church Rev. Arthur W. Stalker, of Ann Arbor, said:

"There should be as much intellectual agility among Christians in favor of peace as there is among those who favor war. We Christians have been asleep while the profiteer and others benefited by war has been active. The time ought to come when no nation will point a gun at another nation unless they have violated a law, and then we should have an international police force to cope with the situation."

At the close of the address Attorney John P. Kirk moved that a resolution be sent to the armament confeence at Washington. It was unanimously adopted and sent.

Rev. Berton Levering was chairman of the Armistice hay celebration. Rev. Hugo Fenker gave the invocation. A fair crowd was in attendance.

MUST STAND TRIAL ASSAULT AND BATTERY

Mrs. Sara Lawrence was again arraigned Tuesday before Judge D. Z. Curtiss on a charge of assault and battery preferred by Mrs. Adelle Vining, who alleges that she was assaulted Sept. 10 last. This same case was dismissed without trial on Nov. 9, when Attorney George J. Burke made a motion to have the case dismissed for the reason that more than 30 days had elapsed since the first arrest. Mrs. Lawrence was not put in jeopardy and consequently must stand trial. The trial was set down for Nov. 18 at 10 a. m.

EXAMINATIONS TO REPEAT.

The civil service commission invites special attention to the fact that in examinations held recenly in Ann Arbor and other cities throughout the United States for domestic science teachers, Indian service, for apprentice fish culturists, bureau of fisheries, and for telegraph operators, departmental and field services, applicants were not secured in the number desired, and that these examinations will again be held on Dec. 7.

Persons interested in these or other examinations should apply to the secretary of the U. S. civil service board at the local postoffice for detailed information and application blanks.

PROCLAMATION.

...), that man would praise the Lord for his goodness, and for his won...derful works to the children of ...men."

...n accordance with the custom ...g ago established by our fathers, ...s entirely fitting that, at this season of the year, we should set apart a day of thanksgiving to Almighty God, the source of all good, for the manifold mercies and blessings that are ours.

There is an old legend which says that there are two angels whose duty it is to bear from earth the prayers of men. One is the angel of Reguests and the other the angel of Thanksgiving. Each carries a large basket as he flies from place to place, listening at the doors of prayer-closets. The angel of Requests soon has his basket filled and heaped up with the supplications of men, but the angel of Thanksgiving, after going all the rounds, has only a few little hymns of gratitude in the bottom of his basket.

Perhaps this fancy is truer than we suppose. People murmer and find fault much oftener than they rejoice and give thanks; but, as we look back over the past year, we have abundant reason for Thanksgiving in our individual lives, as a state, and as a nation. A sufficient harvest has been gathered and we are assured of sustenance for man and beast. Our people as a rule have been sober and steadfast, honest and industrious. No other land has been so highly favored as our own. We have still grave problems to solve, but, gaining courage from the experience of the past, we may go forward in hope and confidence, guided and blessed by the Providence of God.

Therefore, by virtue of the authority vested in me as governor of the State of Michigan, I hereby join the president of the United States in designating Thursday, November 24, 1921, as a day of thanksgiving and prayer.

Given under my hand and the great seal of the state this tenth ...ay of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and twenty-one, and of the commonwealth the eighty-fifth.

ALEX. J. GROESBECK,
Governor.

...CHARLES J. DELAND,
Secretary of State.

RECREATION ACTIVITIES IN THE CITY SCHOOLS

Last Tuesday night at the Prospect school the second dancing party of the Neighborhood club of that center was held. A fine crowd of adults was out for the party. Hart's three-piece orchestra furnished the music, which was appreciated by all. Officers were elected as follows: Fred Beck, president; Mrs Edgar Hay, vice-president, and Judge Stadtmiller, secretary and treasurer. The club is made up of the adults living around Prospect school and all are eligible to come to the parties. A small charge is made to defray expenses. The next party will be Nov. 29. All of the community are invited.

Thursday evening at the Prospect school the first moving pictures for the center will be shown. Nine reels of good films have been secured, two reels on comedy, two educational reels and five reels of drama. A small admission of 10 cents will be charges of all. The show will start at 7:15 sharp. The idea is not to make money but to furnish recreation for the people of that particular community.

Saturday morning at 10 o'clock there will be the regular story hour in the school building. All children are invited to attend. This is free to all. A good crowd has been in attendance at the first two meetings.

The same program is being carried on in the Woodruff school. This week Friday the moving pictures will be shown. After school there will be one show for the children of the community and in the evening for the adults and children who can come. The show will start in the evening at 7 sharp.

The story hour in the Woodruff school is at 10 o'clock Saturday morning. The largest attendance of the story hours is at this building.

All this work is under the supervision of the recreation commission which is working with the Parent-Teachers' clubs in this work.

CRANE MILLINERY IN STOCK REDUCING SALE

May E. Crane is advertising a removal sale prior to moving her millinery stock to her new location at 20 North Huron street. The sale will start Saturday, Nov. 19, and is made in order to reduce stock. The ladies of Ypsilanti and vicinity will do well to patronize this sale, as it means a chance to buy the well known makes of Gage and Fisk hats at prices below cost. Everything in the store is advertised at astonishingly low prices.

LITTLE GIRL FINDS LOST POCKETBOOK

Little Loraine Mazal walked into the police office Tuesday and asked the chief of police if he had a pocketbook there which had been returned. The chief inquired of the little girl how much money she had in the purse. She said one cent, a looking glass and a thimble. "Here is your pocketbook," Chief Connors said. "Are they any charges," she asked. "None at all," the chief replied.

KIWANIS CLUB HEAR GOOD TALK ON ADVERTISING

Harvey Campbell, of Detroit, spoke Wednesday at the Kiwanis club meeting on "Advertising." He told of a number of well known articles that had made a fortune for the company that put them on the market through advertising and then thinking they had more orders than they could fill, stopped advertising and the company went broke. His talk was much appreciated and he was given a rising vote of thanks.

CASE DISMISSED.

On motion of Attorney John P. Kirk the case against Harvey James, accused of not obeying an order of the board of health relative to a connection with the sewer was dismissed. The city attorney stated that Mr. James had made the necessary connection with the sewer and that if the case was now tried it would border on persecution.

WOMAN INSTANTLY KILLED HUSBAND HURT

Mrs Charles Waite was instantly killed Monday afternoon when the automobile occupied by herself and husband, Charles Waite, was struck near the Belleville road by a westbound interurban local car. Her husband was seriously injured and was rushed to Beyed hospital, where he is suffering from a lacerated scalp and a dislocated shoulder.

The couple, who lived at Flushing, in company with Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Niles, were on their way to Florida to spend the winter and had stopped at a farm yard to inquire the way. In backing out the automobile was backed onto the car track in front of the fast approaching car.

OFFICERS OF SIGNAL CORPS ENTERTAIN

The officers of the Signal Corps entertained 60 of the men in the high school lunch room Thursday evening. The supper was served by the Signal Corps Auxiliary. Major Loren Grieves, of Lansing, was expected to address the company but was unable to be present. Major Arnold gave an interesting talk on "What is Expected of the Signal Man." Lieut. Schrepper spoke on "Entertainment," and Lieut. Cleary spoke on "The Military Ball," with special reference to the ball to be given Dec. 2 at the Masonic temple.

Mrs. Wm. Webb, president of the auxiliary, spoke of the relation of the woman's organization to the Signal Corps and referred briefly to the pleasant memories of the work with and for the the signal men who made up the old company and said the ladies were as ready to stand behind the boys and help them in every possible way.

Music on the piano by Fred Bergin and singing by a group of the boys made a delightful evening. Before going back to the armory, where they were dismissed, the ladies were given a rousing vote of thanks for their part in making an enjoyable evening.

STATE BACKWARD IN DIPHTHERIA CONTROL

More children are dying from diphtheria in Michigan at the present time in proportion to population than died in 1908 throughout the United States registration area, reports from the state department of health prove.

In 1908 the diphtheria death rate for the registration area, which now comprises 33 states, was 21.5 per 100,000 population.

For the first eight months of 1901 Michigan's diphtheria death rate averaged 21.7 per 100,000 population.

"This means that Michigan is years behind other states in the prevention of diphtheria deaths," says Dr. R. M. Olin, commissioner of health. "Ten years ago Michigan's diphtheria death rate — largely through good luck—was slightly lower than that of the registration area, though it has been consistently higher since 1916.

"Other states have reduced their diphtheria death rates and brought an entirely preventable disease under control through the application of the scientific weapons: Antitoxin to prevent death in case of sickness, and toxin-antitoxin to immunize against sickness. Michigan's rate has increased because only the well-to-do and the indigent classes generally have had the protection of antitoxin. After Jan. 1 the state will furnish antitoxin without cost to everyone."

During October 1,570 cases of diphtheria were reported to the state department of health compared to 1,245 cases reported in October of 1920.

WOODRUFF-PARENT TEACHERS' CLUB NOV. 13

The Woodruff Parent-Teacher club had a most interesting meeting Tuesday evening, Nov. 13. The special committee appointed to investigate the cost of serving milk to children reported with recommendations that the children whose parents are desirous of having their children served have that opportunity.

Mrs. Iba Bassett, who represented the club at the Michigan State Teachers' institute in Detroit, gave a full and interesting report.

A decision was reached whereby the schoolhouse will be open every Friday evening. Next Friday a motion picture of ten reels will be shown. The following Friday evening there will be a community dance.

INSPECTION NIGHT DAUGHTERS VETERANS

Saturday night was inspection night for the local tent of the Daughters of Veterans. Mrs. Ida Glasgow, of Grand Rapids, department inspector, was present and after inspection complimented the tent on the efficient manner in which they conducted their meetings. In a short address she told of the good work being done by the Daughters of Veterans all over the country and made especial mention of the many kind things done for old soldiers who live in the Soldiers' home in Grand Rapids.

Mrs. Allie B. Scott, department president, also gave a talk and urged that members see to it that no old veteran is allowed to go hungry or want for any of the comforts of life.

TWINS AND TRIPLETS ARE ON THE GAIN

Twin children born in Michigan in 1920 numbered 2,216, an increase of 550 children or 225 sets of twins over the 1919 total of twin births, according to a report issued by the state department of health

Eleven sets of triplets were born in 1920, compared to four sets in 1919. No births of quadruplets have been reported since 1917, records show. Detroit is credited with 248 of the twin children and three sets of triplets in 1919, and with 638 of the twins and four sets of triplets whose births were reported in 1920. Grand Rapids reported the births of 70 twins and one set of triplets in 1919 and 82 twins in 1920.

With 92,245 births reported throughout the state last year there was approximately one chance out of 42 that twins would be born; in 1919 there was one chance out of 50. It is estimated that two per cent of the population, or 76,361 of he state's 3,817,555 residents, is composed of twins, triplets or quadruplets.

Capability of bearing twins is known to be hereditary, the twinning capacity in some family strains being through the males only, while in others the tendency to twin production passes along the female line. "There is evidence," says one authority, "that a stronger inherited influence is necessary for the production of twins of opposite sex than for the production of female twins, and that a very decided prepotency on the father's side is requisite for the production of male twins."

YPSILANTI AGAIN MAKES A RECORD

PATRIOTIC SERVICE DRIVE PRACTICALLY G ES OVER FIRST DAY—OVER $8,000 SUBSCRIBED

Workers for the Red Cross drive started Sunday when women solicitors canvassed the city for membership funds. Over $800 was collected, and as the drive does not end until the 24th it is expected that the full quota will be easily raised.

Tuesday the Patriotic Service league started their drive to raise $10,000. At a luncheon Tuesday noon at the Masonic temple Chairman D. L. Quirk made the announcement that $2,700 had been subscribed by voluntary subscriptions, which was considered a very good start toward the $10,000 goal. At this meeting workers from the Kiwanis and Rotary clubs were present and each was given their territory to solicit.

The funds will include aid for the following: Ypsilanti Home association, lady dental clinic, support recreation budget, Boy Scouts, Campfire Girls, Social Service workers, Normal Y. W. C. A., three state children's aid societies, Public Health Nursing service, bronze memorial tablets on Cross street bridge, contribution to a rest room, and a gift from all Ypsilanti citizens to the Near East relief.

At the churches Sunday the pastors urged their members to give freely to the fund. Rev. Fr. Hardy of St. John's Catholic church urged his members to subscribe to the Red Cross, because of its aid to the disabled veterans of the war and their families. Each year the disabled grow in numbers, he stated.

Tuesday night better than $8,000 of the quota of $10,000 had been subscribed and it is confidently expected that Ypsilanti will again go over the top as it always does in matters of this kind.

JOHN MCCORMACK AT HILL AUDITORIUM

John McCormack, the world-renowned Irish tenor, who is to be heard in Hill auditorium, Ann Arbor, in the Choral Union series, Tuesday, Nov. 22, has prepared a particularly attractive program for the occasion. He will be assisted by Donald McBeth, a violinist of extraordinary ability, whose name has been linked with McCormack's owing to the many engagements which they have filled jointly. Edwin Schneider, one of the finest accompanists, will also appear in the program.

An attractive feature of McCormack recitals is the fact that Mr. McCormack is always generous with encores and usually includes about as many unannounced numbers as are scheduled on the formal program. Among the unannounced numbers are invariably found such beautiful songs as "Mother Machre," which have become inseparably linked with his name.

In spite of the fact that the sale of course tickets for the Choral Union series has been the largest in the history of the Choral Union additional requests for tickets are being received daily and the management is making arrangements to provide seats for a couple of hundred people on the stage and also to sell a limited number of standing room tickets. Orders for tickets will be filled in the order of receipt so long as the supply holds out.

The program in full is as follows:

1. (a) O Sleep, Why Dost Thou Leave Me (Semele), Handel; (b) Ombra mai fu (Largo), Handell, Mr. McCormack.
2. (a) Prelude, Pugnani-Kreisler; (b) Variations on theme of Corelli, Tartini-Kreisler,Mr. McBeth.
3. (a) La Caravane, Ernest Chausson: (b) Go Not Happy Day, Frank Bridge; (c) When Night Descends, S. Rachmaninoff; (d) L'Alba Separa, Paolo Fosti, Mr. McCormack.
4. Irish Folk Songs: (a) The Bard of Armagh, arranged by Hughes; (b) The Ballynure Ballad, arranged by Hughes; (c) She Moved Through the Fair, arranged by Hughes; (d) The Yover's Curse, arranged by Hughes, Mr. McCormack.

Did You Ever

put a penny in a chewing-gum machine and then not get any gum because the machine didn't work?

Got cheated and felt provoked, didn't you?

Beware that the same cheating doesn't occur to you when buying pipe for a plumbing job. Exceptional cheapness in price means some sort of "a nigger in the wood pile." Unless you put your money in good, genuine pipe, you're liable to get nothing in return in the way of satisfying service. You lose, not just one cent, but many dollars—for pipe failures are costly.

Good pipe is cheapest in the long run and makes satisfied customers. That's why we sell it.

What is the Difference in the New Improved ESSEX?

Time and hard exacting service show the real difference in the way cars are built. The care exercised in building Essex cars is not lavished merely on exterior "selling points." It goes equally into parts you may never camine. You see and profit by that workmanship in long continued smoothness, efficiency and quietness of operation.

The New Improved Essex retains all the qualities through which the old Essex established its noted records and won the esteem of owners. But in addition are refinements and improvements that will delight and surprise owners of the old Essex quite as much as non-owners.)

It is a Greater ESSEX Than That Which Men Praised Thus Highly

"50,000 Miles— Never Failed"

"My Essex was purchased in March, 1919, and has been driven more than 50,000 miles. My car will average 20 miles to the gallon of gasoline in the city and will give greater mileage in the country. My total repair expense has been less than $150.

"48,000 Miles at Low Cost"

"I have driven my Essex 48, 000 miles without replacing over $50 worth of parts. I get about 17 miles to the gallon of gasoline, and about 150 miles to the quart of oil. It has been more than satisfactory in every way. The best car on the market."

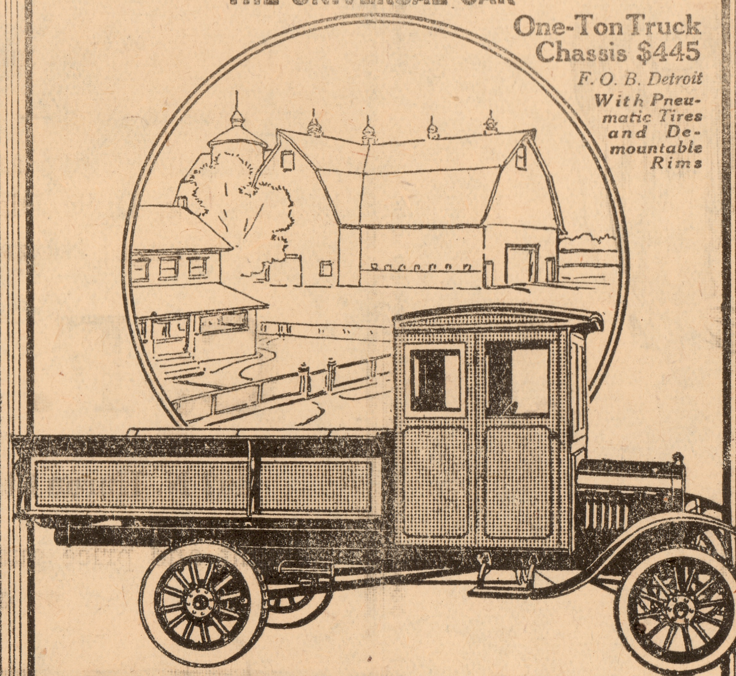
THE UNIVERSAL CAR



The One-Ton Truck

The Ford One-Ton Truck first made its appeal to the farmer and the merchant because of the merits of Ford Cars. And it made its wonderful reputation and great sales record because it lived up to every claim made for it.

The reliable Ford Motor, the special Ford steel chassis, the aluminum bronze worm-drive, all combine to produce a truck of unusual power, capacity and strength—a truck that lasts in service; a truck that solves the haulage problem at a very small operating and upkeep expense. Hence the demand for the Ford One-Ton Truck is constantly on the increase.

For the good of your business, whether it be farming, merchandising or manufacturing, you should come in and look over the Ford One-Ton Truck—NOW!

IMPORTANT

We are prepared to furnish the Ford Truck equipped either with Standard or Special Gearing. The Standard Gearing gives the truck a maximum of power. The Special Gearing increases the speed of the truck from five to seven miles an hour, converting it into a Fast Delivery Car.

"Say, young feller, you've got 'em bad," he commented. "But that'll be all right. Just you wait till we get to Angels, and then you can find out all these funny things you're so dead anxious to know."

"Hold on a minute," I interposed as he was trying to escape. "Atropia hasn't always been as dead as it is now, has it? What was its name when it was alive and able to sit up and take nourishment?"

"Huh?" he queried; and then: "Oh, I get you, now; it used to be called Placerville."

"Thank you; that helps. Now how much farther is it to Angels?"

"'Bout twenty miles."

"All right. And when will there be a train coming back to this Atropia place?"

"Way-freight — tomorruh mornin'—eight-thirty out o' Angels."

"Good. Now if those fire people and the brass band don't miss me—" I couldn't resist the temptation to give him a final shot, and it hit the bull's-eye. As he edged away I could see by his expression that he still thought me crazy.

When I got back to my Pullman after luncheon I perceived at once that the train conductor had promptly passed the word about the episode in the dining car. The Pullman conductor evidently had his weather eye on me, and the negro porter shied every time he passed my section. This was rich, but if I could have known the tenth part of what was going to pop out of this Pandora box that I had foolishly dug up in the dining car, the amusement feature would speedily have been forgotten in a pretty strenuous effort to straighten things out while there was yet time.

I descended from the train at my ticket-named destination of Angels, and found a typical mining camp of a single street and a tawdry, dusty dreariness scarcely exceeded by that of the dead-alive Atropia. The first thing I saw on the station platform was my train conductor talking earnestly to a large, desperadoish-looking man whose greatest need was for a clean shave. By the manner of the two I saw that their talk was aiming itself at me; the railroad man was only too plainly warning the Angelic person that Angels the Blest had a probably harmless, but possibly dangerous, maniac in its midst.

Still I saw only the humorous side of it and refused to be disturbed. Fired by the ambition to find some way of returning at once to Atropia, before the magic horse and dog should disappear, I tramped off in search of a place where I could leave my two grips. The place that offered, and the only one, was the "Celestial Hotel," and I wondered what sly wag had suggested the name, which was a double pun upon the name of the town and the fact that the tavern, half restaurant and half lodging-house, was kept by a Chinaman.

But I secured accommodation, and as I was turning to leave the restaurant-tavern trouble loomed up in the shape of the heavy-shouldered desperadoish-looking person whom I had seen at the station talking with the train conductor.

"I'm onto you with both feet," he remarked, boring me with an eye that I could easily fancy might strike terror into the heart of the most reckless criminal. "I'm givin' you warnin' right now that no funny business don't go in this man's town; see?"

"I'm quite harmless," I assured him. "Give me a little information, and I'll forthwith remove myself from the confines of your charming city. How far is it by wagon-road to Placerville-Atropia, and how can I get there?"

"My gosh!" he said gloomily; "two of you in the same dog-goned week!"

"Even so. When did the other one arrive?"

"Day before yistidday. He didn't look so much bughouse as you do, but I reckon he must 'a' been off his kawhoop, too, 'r he wouldn't 'a' gone to 'Tropia."

"Let him rest in peace. Do I get my information?"

"Shore: we speeds the partin' guest. You've come apast your place. Twenty-one mile back; and the way-freight 'll git you there to-morruh mornin'."

"I'm going to Atropia—this afternoon," I bragged.

He let me pass, and I tramped up the street until I found the one livery stable. Here, again, my fool reputation had quite evidently outrun me. The man had idle horses, plenty of them, as I couldn't help seeing, but I couldn't hire one for love or money. When it came right down to the pinch, he wouldn't even sell me one.

By this time I was in a hot sweat of impatience to be on my way; to bridge that twenty-one miles before the elusive clue—if it were the clue—could once more dodge me and vanish into thin air. In that frame of mind I told the cautious liveryman, in gentle phrase, what I thought of him and his kind, and hurried down to the railroad, hoping to be able to catch an east-bound train of some kind, any kind, whose crew could be bribed or cajoled into carrying me to Atropia.

It was just as I was about to inquire of the telegraph operator what the chances were that the great temptation rose up and slapped me in the face. Up the grade from the westward a tiny, three-wheeled car, carrying two men, came spinning along. I recognized it at once as a track-inspection car, driven by a small gasoline engine; an evolution of the old velocipede car, foot and hand-driven and used by roadmasters and other railroad men for making quick trips over short distances.

In half a minute the little car rattled up to the station and made a quick stop, the two men setting the brakes and hopping off to dodge into the telegraph office. They left the little pop-popping engine running at idling speed, and in a flash I saw my chance. Of course, if I should steal the car, I'd be caught and arrested and hauled off somewhere to be tried and fined; but before any of these untoward things could happen, I should have settled that biting question of the ownership of the piebald pony and the harlequin-faced dog.

With a quick glance over my shoulder to make sure that the coast was still clear, I slipped into the driving-seat, jerked the throttle open and released the clutch, praying fervently that the switches might be set right for me at the upper end of the Angels yard.

As the machine began to gather speed, I looked back. What I saw was a-plenty. Three men, one of them,

What I Saw Was a-Plenty.

whom I took to be the telegraph operator, in his shirt-sleeves, came running up the station platform. The shirt-sleeved man was yelling and waving something that glistened in the sunlight. Next I heard the distance-diminished crack of a pistol and a blunt-nosed bullet sang a whining little lullaby to me as it tore past.

I flung up an arm to show the pistol-firer that he had missed, and then the small car swung around the shoulder of the nearest hill and Angels became only a backward-flitting memory.

CHAPTER V.

The Magic Triad.

To be stopped before I could reach my goal was no part of my plan, so I opened things up and gave the little three-wheeled dinky all the gas it could use, keeping a sharp lookout ahead, and meaning to pull up a little way short of the graveyard city, abandoning the car and making the actual approach on foot.

Judging from the way the scenery was racing backward, I estimated that the little car must be doing at least thirty miles to the hour; which meant forty minutes or such a matter, to cover the twenty-one miles. If opposing train or trains, whatever they might be, would only keep out of my way for those precious forty minminutes. . . .

I pushed the small motor to its limit and was getting along beautifully until suddenly, on a grade that was a bit steeper than usual, the popping exhaust quit short off, the engine slowed down, and the car, squeaking and grinding, came to a stand on a low embankment between two of the hill cuttings.

There wasn't anything very complicated about the little motor, and I soon discovered that a broken ignition wire was what had killed it. Happily, there was a small toolbox under the seat, and in the kit there was a pair of pliers. But—sometimes—and this was one of them—a bit of material is as important as the tools to work with. The wire was too short to couple up again, and there wasn't an inch of spare wire to be found in the kit.

They say that necessity is the mother of invention; but I'll defy anybody to invent a piece of wire in the middle of the Great Sahara desert. Every minute I was expecting to hear the rumble and roar of a train.

In this extremity it was a little desert zephyr that gave me the great idea. A gentle breeze came sighing up the draw from some overheated area out beyond, and finding no trees on the barren hills, it sang its little song in the thickly clustering telegraph wires on the poles. Why, sure! I said to myself; here was my wire—miles and miles of it. All I had to do was to climb up and get it.

Gentle reader, I wonder if you've ever tried to climb a telegraph pole without the contrivances that a lineman buckles upon his feet? If you haven't, the advice of this amateur is—don't. Half a dozen times I shinnied up to perhaps the height of a man's head, only to come sliding down again on a run. At last, by a series of inchings I contrived to get within arm's-reach of the lowest crosspiece. Pliers in hand, I strained for the nearest wire, progged it, and began to twist it back and forth to break it.

Not to let me miss any of the thrills, it was at the precise instant of the wire-breaking that my straining ears caught the sound they had been listening for; a far-away, drumming rumble that seemed to come from nowhere in particular. Then, out of the same indefinite circumambience came a warning that was still more unmistakable—the long-drawn blast of a locomotive whistle.

I didn't climb down that pole; I came down like the time-ball on the flagstaff in Washington at high noon. Moreover, I struck the ground running, as one might say. All thoughts of tinkering that confounded motor had vanished and my one great object in life was to get the car off the track before a worse thing should happen. I was doing fairly well with the lifting and tugging when the enemy hove in sight less than five hundred yards away. And that wasn't all, either. At precisely the same instant, as if it had been timed by the same mechanism that had brought the freight train, here came a wild engine around the curve in the opposite direction, with its whistle valve held open and making a racket to wake the dead. The bereft motor-car riders had found a locomotive somewhere and were chasing me.

One mad heave at the stranded gasoline car, a mighty boost that got all but one wheel of it in the clear, and I was gone—streaking it like a jack-rabbit for the tall timber—only there wasn't a stick of timber nearer than the slopes of the backgrounding mountains.

One glance over my shoulder as I fled showed me what I was in for: that the story was to be immediately continued in our next. Both engineers tried to stop; did stop in time to avert the greater catastrophe. Three or four men jumped from the freight and two from the wild engine to come tearing after me. I fancied I could give them their money's worth at that game—being in pretty fair training—so I pitched out to try to turn the hypothetical theory into a condition.

It was a great race. Through one gap and into another we went, making figure eights around the hills and back again, dodging into new ravines and out of them into others, circling among great sandstone boulders that took all sorts of weird shapes in the passing glimpse.

I don't know just how long the chase lasted, but it was long enough to give me a very considerable degree of respect for the nerve and persistence of those highly indignant railroad men. We must have been miles away from the scene of the disaster when I finally left them behind and lost them. When I looked back and found myself alone with the solitudes I sat down upon a flat rock to gasp and laugh. It had all been so supremely ridiculous, and so beautifully in keeping with the reputation I had left behind me at Angels, that I felt sure that now nothing less than a verdict of expert alienists would ever serve to convince these Red Desert folk that I was anything but an escaped lunatic.

After the breathing spell I kept on up the valley, heading away from the setting sun, and feeling certain that, sooner or later, I must come out somewhere in the neighborhood of Atropia.

Two hours later I came into a sort of an excuse for a road. Being pretty well winded by the stiff climb out of the canyon ravine, I sat down at the roadside to rest a bit and to decide which way I should go, to the right or to the left. Just as I was making up my mind I heard a patter of feet and a dog barked.

A moment later I could see the beast, indistinctly. He had been coming up the road and had stopped at the sight—or scent—of me. Since a dog argued the proximity of a dog-owning human being, I called coaxingly: "Here, Towser—here—come on, old fellow—that's a boy!" and the curious thing about it is that he did it, running up a little way and stopping, and finally coming to squat before me and to lift a paw for me to shake.

CHIMNEY CLEANING TIME.

"Keep your chimney cleaned or keep the telephone number of the fire department handy," counsels a fire insurance inspector. It is a friendly tip, and not to be despised, as the inspector goes on to explain.

"It is pretty sure to be one or the other, a clean chimney or a fire. Now before cold weather sets in is the time to have your chimneys inspected and see that you are all set for the winter. This is especially true if you have been burning gas. Gas eats out the mortar between the bricks if the chimney has not been properly lined. Then you start a coal fire and sparks fall into the attic through the bricks.

It isn't just gas-eaten chimneys that need inspecting. An accumulation of soot in any chimney or in a length of stovepipe is a fire menace. The kindling of winter's hotter fire sets the soot ablaze. The sparks fly, and the trouble begins, back in the walls or up on the ridge pole of the house, where it is hardest to reach.

While the chimneys are being put in order the heating appliances themselves may well come in for a going over. Defects should be repaired and drafts and checks attended to, so that the family and not the coal men may profit most from the family coal pile.

IT WAS SOME NIFTY BALL GAME TO SEE

Dear Miss Rice: Just a few lines to let you know that I was glad to receive your kind letter. I thought you'd like to know that we played ball last Saturday, and that this is a very accurate description of it:

The game opened with Molassus at the stick, Spallpox catching, and Cigar in the box with lots of smoke. Horn was at first, Fiddle on second, backed by Corn in the field. He made it hot for Umpire Apple, who was rotten. Axe came to bat and chopped Cigar, while Brick walked and Sawdust filled the bases. Hammer made a hit, and Twenty made a score. Cigar went out and Balloon started to pitch but went up in the air; then Cherry tried, but it was wild. Old Ice kept cool in the game till he was hit by Pitcher; then you should have heard Ice scream.

Cabbage had a good lead but got stewed and was put out of the game. He was not the only one, for Umpire Apple got canned. Crass covered lots of ground, and the crowd cheered when Spider caught a fly. Bread loafed on third and tried to pump Organ, but Organ played fast and put out Light. In the fifth inning Wind began to blow about what he could do, and the way Steam roasted peanuts was a fright. Knife was out for cutting first base. In the third inning Corn was shocked when Hammer made a hit. Trombone followed with a slide for home, but Meat was on the plate to put him out. Lightning pitched and struck two men; Door took his place and shut out the opposing team, 1 to 0. There was lots of betting on the game and Soap cleaned up the gang.

That's all that happened, Miss Rice, and I'll say that it was enough.

Miss Louise Meyers was reported quite sick last week.

CHILDREN'S CLOTHES.

There are so many way of economizing in the children's clothing that they may be neatly and comfortably dressed and yet not have anything really new in their wardrobe except shoes. By the aid of a pattern the best parts of old underwear can be made into nice warm undergarments for children, the seams stitched on the machine, then catstitched open. If the children have outgrown their union suits but they are still good, cut them apart at the waistline and put in a band plenty large of unbleached muslin. If the waists are good but the pants worn, buy the ready-made pants only and stitch them on the muslin band neatly and you have a union suit again that will wear as long as a new one. Princess shaped petticoats of flannel, with or without sleeves, are excellent for cold weather, and discarded wool shirtwaists and skirts may be utilized in making these garments. The best parts of men's and women's cloth garments can be used for either the small boy or little girl, and the very heavy cloth can be made into caps, leggins or snowballing mittens for the children and good patterns can be bought for a trifle. It is nearly always necessary to wash old material to freshen it up sufficiently and by washing through warm suds made with dissolved borax soap chips the cloth comes out fresh, clean and of good color and often the cloth can be made up with the wrong side out. The best parts of a tan overcoat was washed clean in the soap chip suds, then pressed carefully and fashioned into a stylish jacket for one young girl, with the good cloth from a dark blue suit of the mother's was washed in the suds and made into a serviceable suit for the small boy. Boys' pants, coats, sweaters, stockings and all woolen things shrink less and are kept a better color when washed in the soap chip suds than when cleaned in any other way and it is especially good for all kinds of underwear, both for children and grown-ups. Those mothers who have tried using knee caps to protect the knees of children's stockings playing around in the house appreciate their value in effecting the desired result, and it is not always necessary to purchase these small articles, as very nice ones can be made from the tops of old kid shoes. If the children's new stockings are faced on the knees and at the heels, the facing being quilted to the stockings with fine stitches, they will last much longera nd do better service.

Mrs. G. M. Hull left Tuesday to spend a few days with Mrs. Lesta Munroe, of Jackson. From there she will be the guest of Mrs. Guy Weter at Belding, and on Saturday will leave for Chicago for a week's stay with Mr. and Mrs. Bert Judd.

The Prodigal Son Comes Home

The Prodigal Son Comes Home

Jim—I've been gone ten years, Mother, and I've knocked about all over the globe. Now, just when I was on the edge of a fortune, my money gave out. I must have two thousand dollars, or I' mbroke forever.

Mother—Is money all? Isn't it glorious that you had to come home to your mother—and that she can help her boy?

Jim—But what can you do, Mother?

Mother—Go to the bureau. Look in the lower drawer. They're my jewels, Jim, I always knew they's come in handy some day. Take them—pawn them—sell them—anything!
